long table was all in pink, pink carnations and ribbons and pink shaded candles making an effective decoration. Souvenirs of French flowers in tiny bouquets were at the individual places. Covers were laid for fourteen.

Mrs. Harry Clark entertained a party of thirty-five of the friends of her mother, Mrs. J. E. Williams, at No. 3 Kenwood place, at an afternoon party in celebration of the seventy-third birthday of Mrs. Williams. Mrs. A. B. Gattrell read a beautiful tribute to Mrs. Williams and she made a touching response. Mrs. W. A. Wright gave a reading and Mrs. Yeager and Mrs. Lambkin read selections appropriate to the occasion, while Mrs. A. H. Peabody and Mrs. Frank Sanders furnished the music.

The rush of spring weddings has its interesting events having been set for this date, the last Wednesday in April. Among the well known young people who have chosen the day are Miss Ruby Lambourn and Stuart Gordon Taylor, Miss Edythe Evans and Tom Williamson, Miss Mae Hardy and William L. Kimball, Miss Mary Wilson and Parley M. Condit, Miss Myrtle Bullock and Loy M. Blakeney.

Mrs. F. C. Faus entertained the members of the Portingilly club yesterday afternoon in the parlors of the Commercial club. Mrs. Florence Dunbar and Mrs. A. H. Peabody assisted her. The usual four tables of bridge were played and after a few more friends came in to enjoy tea. The rooms were bright with the spring flowers.

The marriage of Miss Ella Schulte and F. J. Shadt will take place today at noon at the home of the bride's parents, the Rev. Elmer I. Goshen officiating. The wedding will be a quiet home affair, with only the family present. Later the young people will leave for Houghton, Mich., to make their home.

Miss Gracia Flanders has issued invitations for a piano recital for her pupil, Miss Grace Cowie, of Rowland hall, to be given in the Consolidated Music hall next Saturday evening. Mrs. Harold Siegel and Otto King will be the assisting artists.

Mr. and Mrs. George S. Tall announce the engagement of their daughter, Della, to Fred Dallimore, the wedding to take place the early part of May.

Miss Mary Walker of Dyersburg, Tenn., who has been visiting Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Traubner, left yesterday for Stockton, Cal., to spend some time with friends there.

A. M. Wrench leaves today for California to spend some time with his son.

THE BACK YARD FARMER

BY
Prof. John Willard Bolte

HOME GROWN ASPARAGUS.

One of the nicest things about being a back-yard farmer is the fact that you can have all of the asparagus that you want to eat if you just take the trouble to once plant it. You will never have to plant it again and the bed will keep right on producing almost as long as the house will last. If you like asparagus at all you like it mighty well, as it is one of those vegetables of a very decided character which are either extremely popular or equally unpopular.

Few people realize that asparagus not only has a sort of medicinal value, but that it actually contains as much muscle forming food as does a similar weight of meat. It has a very high protein content and should be much more generally grown than it is.

If you have a sunny patch of ground, twelve feet long by about six feet wide or more, you can plant it to asparagus at a very little expense, and next year and each succeeding year you will have all the asparagus that your family can eat. The plants will begin to come through the ground early in the spring and will remain in edible condition under proper handling until well into hot weather. Of course you could cut a few stalks the first year, but your results will be very much better in the end if you do not attempt to use any of the crop until the following year.

Asparagus must have a comparatively light, fertile, well-drained soil. Heavy clay will not grow satisfactory asparagus and if your garden is heavy and cold you will get much better results by excavating a bed or trench to a depth of 18 inches or 2 feet and filling in the hole with mellow sandy loam before planting.

It is better to plant asparagus on soil that has been used for a garden for several years than to put it in new, broken soil. Spade the ground as deep as possible, the deeper the better, and the roots run deep and do not do well in a very compact soil. Then fine the soil with hoe and rake and it is in a fine mellow condition, although not necessarily as fine as for seed. This should be done about the first of May in most climates, although it may be done much earlier in the south.

The plants cost between 1 and 3 cents each, depending upon the size and variety. They should be secured from some local seedsmen, or from an old asparagus bed and set in rows about 4 inches apart in the rows. The top of the crown of the plant about 8 inches from the surface of the soil. Have the rows a foot apart and the plants 6 inches apart in the rows. The top of the new plants should just about reach the surface and the ground should be covered with several inches of stable manure.

Keep the patch free from weeds during the first season. The second spring you can begin to cut the tender green and white stalks as soon as they begin to push through the ground. Use a regular asparagus knife, as it brings the stalks to the surface and prevents injury to the roots. Cut every tip that shows, as they get tough as soon as the light strikes them, and if you let any of them go to seed that plant will cease sending out new ones. This is the reason for cutting them early in the morning before the sun hits them.

After the season is over and the hot weather has come the bed should be permitted to go to seed, and it should be kept free from weeds at all times. After the plants have ripened they should be cut down and burned, the ashes being thrown back on the bed for fertility.
